SISTERS TOGETHER IN VALLEY OF DEATH

Mrs. Mary Gibson And Mrs. Harriet Payne Die Monday Night--Deaths Great Shock To Their Families--Heart Failure Ends Both Lives Of Love And Usefulness.

MRS. GIBSON'S FUNERAL HERE

Mrs. Harriet Payne died Monday night at her home near Lodiburg and in less than three hours her sister, Mrs. Mary Claycomb Gibson died at the home of her niece, Mrs. Tom Robertson. Mrs. Gibson had gone to Lodiburg to be with Mrs. Payne, who was taken ill about a week ago and fifteen minutes after she received word of her sister's death, she was stricken with heart failure.

About two o'clock Tuesday morning Mrs. Hamman received a telephone message announcing the death of her mother and aunt and the sad news was a severe shock to the family and friends.

Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Gibson were both born in Breckenridge county near the place of their death and their maiden name was Claycomb. Mrs. Gibson would have been sixty four years old the twenty-seventh of July. December 4, 1862 she was married to Augustine Gibson. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Hamman, and three sons, Lige William and Larkin and four grandchildren: Edison and Mary Gibson, Mary Christina and Charlie Lee Hamman. Mrs. Gibson was a member of the Baptist church and her life was rich with Christian deeds and a mother's love and devotion to her family. The body was brought to Cloverport yesterday morning for the funeral and burial.

Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Gibson were the last members of their family to die and their hearts were so securely knit together in love that even death did not tear them apart. Mrs. Payne had a life full of cares and blessings. She was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom are living. They are: four sons Mack, Grayson, Carl and Hewitt Payne and five daughters, Mrs. Owen Keys, Mrs. Frank Hall, Mrs. Ed. Robertson, Misses Blanche and Nannie Payne.

Tribute To Mother.

Dear Mr. Bat-bage: Put me among those who would bear tribute to the mothers of Breckenridge County. My mother taught me to fear nothing night or day. She taught us to obey implicitly, and always to show respect to older people. She was kind to the sick and the poor. Left with a family of small children during the war, she kept them together and provided for them. I hope to see you immediately after Mother's Day. Sincerely yours,

S. C. Bates.

At Father's Bedside.

A. T. Lewis died at Catawissa, Penn. Sunday morning. He was the father of W. H. Lewis, of Irvington. He leaves a wife and three children. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and two children left Irvington last week to be at the bedside of his father.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Robbins announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lena S. Adkisson to Mr. Arthur C. Basham. The wedding will be at the bride's home near Mystic on Sunday afternoon, May the 12th at 3 o'clock.

MOTHER

Contributed by Drue E. Gregory

WHAT a wonderful being is a mother; how she enriches and gladdens home with sympathy, kindness and gentleness, so unmindful of self, so thoughtful of others. Other people may love you now and then, but they easily forget you, often misunderstand you, misrepresent and quickly condemn you. Mother loves you all the time with an unchanging love; she loves for you for she cares. She understands and shows her appreciation of you. She overlooks your faults to praise your virtues and the only unkind thing she ever does is to die and leave you, and even this is not her will.

Harris, on a note for $40 was decided for the defendants.

GOV. BECKHAM DEFENDS HIMSELF FROM ATTACK

Comes Back at Editor Henry Watterson in Vigorous Manner, Branding Him as Being Absolutely Devoid of all Sense of Honor.

Under a Frankfort date line former Governor J. C. W. Beckham ably defends himself from the wanton and outrageous attacks of the editor of the Courier-Journal in the following vigorous style:

"To the Democrats of Kentucky:

"The recent libelous attacks upon me by Watterson in the Courier Journal would not warrant any response from me, except for their bearing upon the political situation in Kentucky and the evidence which they give of his sinister purposes. I dislike a personal controversy with any man, but especially so with a man absolutely devoid of all sense of honor and wanting in every instinct of a gentleman; whose utter disregard for the truth and the customary decencies of debate or discussion between gentlemen, suggests that his perception of the difference between right and wrong, between truth and falsehood, has been dulled.

"Watterson has stated that I and friends of mine had formed a conspiracy to capture the Kentucky delegation and barter it for our selfish interests at the Baltimore convention, he uttered a deliberate and wilful falsehood. No living man knows better than he does, that I am not of the bartering kind, for there has not been a time in the last ten years that I could not have purchased his cheap flattery and immunity from attacks in his paper by a sacrifice of my self-respect and the public interest.

"No longer ago than last January (he well remembers the circumstances) if I had agreed to support him in getting the instruction from this State, for the nomination for the presidency, I would now be a victim of his loathsome praise rather than the honored object of his scurrilous abuse. I may not be entitled to any credit for spurning the consideration of such a ridiculous and egregious suggestion of political folly, but Kentucky Democrats will at least commend me for having refused to become a party to a schemethat would have had them endorsing for the highest office within the gift of the people a man who has not character enough to qualify him to hold the lowest office in the land.

Could Have Had Terms

"I could have escaped the coveted calumnies of his pen and paper some years ago, if I had yielded to his solicitations that I make way for him to run for Governor of Kentucky. And in 1907, when, as Governor, I had to appoint a Mayor and other offices in the city of Louisville, I could have insured my election to the United States Senate by turning over to his gang the appointments of those officers and surrendering my determination to see that the laws of the Commonwealth were enforced in that city.

"I might give other instances, if necessary, to show that no one knows better than he that his recent charges against me were absolutely and wholly false and were born of the hate and malice which he has felt toward me for several years.

"A place upon the blacklist of his paper, though at times unpleasant, is an honor to be sought by any conscientious public man in Kentucky. No man in public life can retain for any length of time the favor and praise of

Sweet Memory of Mother

Dear John:

While my mother died when I was 14 years old, her life left such an imprint on my life I hope I will never forget to emulate her true, devoted, Christian character. How well do I remember her parting message as I stood by the bedside, she holding my hand, said to me: "be a good boy my son and try and meet me in HEAVEN."

Below I give a verse which she taught me in early childhood, that many sons and daughters should read and heed:

I ought to love my mother, she loved me long ago,
There is on earth no other, that ever loved me so.
I ought to try to please her, and all her words to mind,
And never vex or tease her nor speak a word unkind.
Though I can never pay her, for all her love and care,
I will honor and obey her while God my life shall spare.

Yours truly,

GOV. BECKHAM DEFENDS HIMSELF

that paper and of its editor and at the same time retain self-respect and the confidence of the people. Whom it cannot control, it seeks to destroy.

Watterson attacked the personal character of W. J. Bryan; his attacks on Grover Cleveland were no less violent; he called Gov. Wilson, of New Jersey, 'a crook,' and so with many other distinguished men whom he disliked, or of whom he was jealous, he has poured upon them the vials of his vindictive and spleenetic rage, in language frequently that only a drunken vulgarian would use.

'Suspicious' Praise

'He has for years suspected me of standing in the way of some of his absurd ambitions and consequently he has placed me in the illustrious ranks of those who have enjoyed the distinction of being the objects of his ennobling abuse. I can still lay claim to the confidence of the good people of Kentucky, inasmuch as for many years I have not subjected myself to suspicion, by having my name praised in the columns of his paper. Whenever a politician receives much praise from him, it is time for honest people to grow suspicious and to make an investigation of his character and associations.

"So far as my attitude in present political matters is concerned, I have no objection to frankly stating it.

"It has not been my purpose to take any active part in the contest in this State over the selection of delegates to the Democratic National Convention, or to encourage in the least, by any prominent participation in it, differences and dissensions within the party.

I have seen no good reason why there should be no excitement or disturbance in Kentucky over the matter, or why the Democrats of the State could not have a convention that would peacefully, harmoniously and patriotically take such action as would commend itself to all good Democrats and aid in doing Kentucky's part toward achieving a great National victory next fall. It has seemed to me that not in many years has the prospect of success been so bright as it is this year; and that nothing but an inexcusable an suicidal mistake by the Democratic party could deprive it of an overwhelming victory at the polls.

Chance For Democrats

"The division in the Republican party appears to be hopeless. With the President as a leader of one faction and the ex-President as the leader of the other, calling each other such bad names, and each exposing the ugly record of the other, it certainly ought to be apparent to the people of the country that a complete change in the national administration is seriously needed, and that the only way in which they can secure the reforms they demand is through the Democratic party.

"I have, therefore, believed that this was indeed the time when Kentucky Democrats could get together and without angry controversies or needless contests, work together for the common good. While, as a private citizen in the quiet pursuit of my professional business, I have felt a deep interest in the success of the party and the triumph of its principles, yet I have not even asked a friend of mine in the State to support me for any honor in the State convention, such as being a delegate to the National convention, for I have no personal ambition above party success and would cheerfully step aside for any arrangement that would further its success.

Approves State Committee

"I heartily approve the action of our State Executive Committee at its recent meeting, in the call it made for the State convention, and yet, neither directly nor indirectly, did I communicate with a single member of that committee, to advise him what I thought the committee should do. In fact, I did not know what it would do until I read of its action in the papers the next day.

"If I had influenced its proceedings I should not have had the slightest objection to its being known. The committee, knowing of the farcical and fraudulent convention and primaries in the city of Louisville, gave to the Democrats there the best method it could, under the circumstances, to have a chance to express their wishes; and I believe that the reputable Democrats of that City should organize, assert their power, and refuse to allow the Whallen-Watterson combination to name for them the delegates to the State convention. It is a grave reflection upon them and injures them in the eyes of the State Democracy to have such elements and such men in control of their organization and representing them in a state convention.

"As to my position in reference to the candidates for the presidency I can cheerfully state it, as I have stated it in conversation with my friends. I have nothing to conceal. I have always been frank with the people of Kentucky and have never once deceived them. I shall heartily support any one of the candidates who may be nominated at Baltimore.

Favors Wilson

"In my judgment, the strongest and most available candidate for us to nominate is Woodrow Wilson. I have thought so for a long time and even favored him when Watterson was for him. And when it became known that he refused to allow himself to be bound by Watterson to Wall street, my admiration for him became greater than ever. Then when Watterson denounced him, I was convinced that he was a clean and incorruptible man. If it should appear by the time the convention meets in Baltimore, that a stronger candidate than Gov. Wilson could be nominated, then I would prefer that candidate. I do not now consider Mr. Clark the strongest candidate.

"Mr. Bryan, in an interview not long ago, in speaking of Wilson and Clark, said: 'I have avoided expressing my preference as to those two gentlemen for several reasons. The first is that I am not clear in my own mind as to which of them would be able to poll the larger vote, and a good deal may depend upon the action of the Republican convention; that is, the course of the convention may effect the relative availability of these two candidates and I would like to have all the light I can get before expressing any opinion regarding either Gov. Wilson or speaker Clark.'

"In other words, Mr. Bryan believes that where the delegates are chosen in a state convention, like ours, progressive and faithful Democrats should be selected and they should be uninstructed. That, I believe, is the correct position for Kentucky Democrats to take in their convention on May 29. Let them pick out reliable Democrats as delegates and send them to the National Convention without instructions.

Clark's Candidacy

"I can understand why some of the Kentucky Congressmen are so ardently for Mr. Clark for, on account of their pleasant associations with him in Congress, they are looking at him from a personal standpoint rather than from the standpoint of availability. Then, too, certain of those Congressmen were in accord with Watterson and the liquor interests in the platform convention last summer, and tried to keep the county unit plank out of the platform. The same gentlemen are still in accord with Watterson and the liquor interests, and are willing to help the latter in their effort to get control of the party organization of the State, capture the next legislature, embarrass the Democratic administration, put the liquor lobby again in control and repeal some of the temperance laws of the State.

Purpose of the Fight

"That is the whole purpose of this fight, led by Watterson and the Courier-Journal, and aided by the Congressional cabal. The Courier-Journal is the well-known organ of the liquor interests in Kentucky. It refused its support to the Democratic state ticket last fall because the county unit plank was in the platform. Every intelligent observer knows that that plank was essential to the success of the ticket.

They persist in renewing the fight, under cover, in the coming convention, and they should be rebuked for injecting that issue into the campaign. That is the reason for the bitterness of the fight upon me and upon the friends of the administration, which has fulfilled so far the promises made to the people in the campaign last fall.

"The attempt is now made to raise a false issue among the Democrats of the State. Watterson charges that I and others have formed a deep conspiracy to wreck the Democratic party. He made identically the same charge last year, and our answer was a Democratic majority of 31,000, won not only without his aid, but with his secret opposition to the ticket.

False Prophet

"What confidence can now be placed in this same false prophet and slanderer? As a matter of fact, if the gentlemen whom he attacks were engaged in any such nefarious scheme as he describes, and possessed all the wealth he figures, they would have had him as a member of the gang long ago, writing double-headed editorials, praising them as patriots instead of calling them pirates; for political history in Kentucky for the last twenty years records that wherever the money is there is always Watterson, greedy for his part of the loot, and venomous towards all of those who would deprive him of any of it. There is never a political bargain counter upon which the editorial policy of the Courier-Journal cannot be found for sale.

"I do not know whether his weakness is congenital, or whether at some time of trial he fell before some strong temptation; but we all know that, since 1896, he has, in political parlance, been classed as a thrifty floater, varying from one side to the other, according to the exigencies of his selfishness or malignancy, denouncing everyone who differed with him, and viciously libeling all of those whom he suspected of standing in the way of his ridiculous ambitions.

Watterson's Ambitions

"He now seeks to be the leader of the Democratic party in Kentucky and is a candidate for a place as delegate-at-large to the National convention, notwithstanding his denials. He has already served notice that he will not support one of the leading candidates for the Democratic nomination for President—Gov. Wilson of New Jersey—if the latter is nominated, and he undoubtedly reserves the right to refuse his support to any other candidate who might be nominated. He was for Gov. Wilson some months ago, and we have all learned why he withdrew his support from him.

"He now says he is for Mr. Clark, and I have no doubt that if he and Col. George Harvey should be unable to connect Mr. Clark with their friend, Mr. Thomas F. Ryan, the Democratic money man of 'big business' in New York, he would just as promptly withdraw his support from him, and denounce him in language equally as abominable as he used about Gov. Wilson. He must be flattered, cajoled and favored to keep his Democracy up to the sticking point. The price of his continued allegiance to any man or to any party is exhausting to the patience or pocketbook of any man or any party. It is impossible that the intelligent Democrats of Kentucky would think of placing such a man in a position where he could again betray them, as he has so often done in the past.

Regrets Controversy

"I regret exceedingly that I should be called upon to speak so plainly and truthfully about this man; but his slanderous attacks upon me in his paper, and his assumption of leadership of the party which he has so often betrayed, demand that a true picture of the man be set before the public. I believe with all my heart the he, with his paper, has done incalculable harm to the progress and to the good name of Kentucky. His skill as a writer has made him all the more dangerous. He has never stood for any good or moral cause in our State. He has invariably appeared as an advocate and champion of the criminal elements. He is the degenerate composite of the characters of Pecksniff and Falstaff. Although he has reached that age, when the sunset of life is supposed to soften with its gentle glow the asperities and bitterness of human character, he is more vindictive and malevolent, if possible, than ever before.

"Coming to Kentucky long after he had reached maturity he has boasted and advertised himself abroad as a typical Kentuckian; and it causes the blush of shame to come back to the cheek of any loyal son of the old Commonwealth to hear strangers ever speak of such a man as representing the chivalrous manhood and lovely womanhood of Kentucky, such as the reckless and irresponsible slanderer that attacks my good name.

Putting On And Off.

"That is the whole purpose of this fight, led by Watterson and the Courier-Journal, and aided by the Congressional cabal. The Courier-Journal is the well-known organ of the liquor interests in Kentucky. It refused its support to the Democratic state ticket last fall because the county unit plank was in the platform. Every intelligent observer knows that that plank was essential to the success of the ticket.

ARMY OFFICERS ROUTED FROM THEIR EASY BERTHS.

Twenty-two Ordered by Secretary of War to Join Troops.

Twenty-two army officers who have been stationed in Washington for years, including one of the rank of brigadier general, have been ordered by the secretary of war to join troops.

The order came as a great surprise, because there had been no hint that such a move was contemplated. The rule is that every four years an army officer must serve two years with troops. However, there have been various ways of eluding the four year rule. In some instances the presence of certain officers has been deemed necessary at the capital because of their efficiency in the lines of executive work to which they have been assigned.

In other instances "pull" has been able to keep officers in Washington who preferred the social and club life there to some post not having most of the joys for a pleasure loving soldier. Some of the men assigned to join troops have been in Washington twelve years and have well established homes there, while most of the others have been away from troops five to seven years. Here is the list of those ordered to troop duty:

Brigadier General W. W. Witherspoon, Major Johnson Haggard, general staff; Captain Charles A. Rhodes, general staff; Captain James A. Moss, Twenty-fourth Infantry; Captain Stanley D. Embick, general staff; Major Paul F. Strub, general staff; Major R. E. Callan, coast artillery; Captain F. P. Bishop, coast artillery; Captain James A. Logan, Jr., subsistence department; Lieutenant Colonel John T. Knight, quartermaster department; Lieutenant Colonel David S. Stanley, quartermaster department; Major Frank B. Cheatham, quartermaster department; Major A. B. Brewster, Inspector general; Lieutenant Colonel John T. Thompson, ordnance department; Lieutenant Colonel George F. Downey, pay department; Lieutenant Colonel W. D. McCaw, medical department; Lieutenant Colonel M. W. Ireland, medical department; Major F. S. Russell, medical department; Colonel H. P. McCain, adjutant general; Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin Alvord, adjutant general; Lieutenant Colonel John Biddle, Forster, judge advocate.

PASSING OF REVERE HOUSE.

Boston Hotel Had Housed Many Celebrated Personages.

No hotel in Boston and few in the United States are richer in associations than the Revere House, which was recently destroyed by fire. Here stayed in the heyday of the hotel's popularity visiting royalty, famous statesmen and soldiers and some of the prima donnas who charmed a generation of Bostonians now dead.

The Revere House was named after the famous Boston patriot Paul Revere. It was opened on May 19, 1847, as the most sumptuous hotel Boston had had up to that time. The ballroom and the banquet halls were regarded as models of splendor and of convenience. Paran Stevens, one of the best known hotel men of the time and the landlord of the Tremont House, was at its head.

It was patronized by Webster, Cleveland, Adeline Patti, Christine Nilsson, Emperor Pedro of Brazil, King Kalakaua of the Hawaiian Islands, Admiral Mohammed Pasha of the Turkish navy, his imperial highness the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia and Generals Grant, Sherman and Sheridan.

Here, too, in 1860, stayed Prince Albert of Wales, the future King Edward VII, of England. One of the rooms in the hotel had ever since been set aside, faded in its decorations, but rich in its associations. It was the room Prince Albert occupied.

EACH GOLD PLATE AN ALARM.

New Burglar Device Protects Hotel's Famous Service.

The owner of one of the big New York hotels, who is an electrical engineer and the inventor of several electrical burglar protection devices now in use, has perfected and installed in his hotel a new device for protecting the gold service of the hotel.

This service is valued at several thousand dollars and consists of various pieces of glass and gold filigree work, as well as solid plate. It is inclosed in numerous cabinets, which up to this time had but the protection of lock and key.

The device installed is so arranged that the lifting of any single piece will ring an alarm bell in the housekeeper's room in the main office and in the rooms of all the watchmen. The shelves upon which the goldware rests are balanced upon a sort of spring, which is set to a certain weight. The removal of any of the weight, however slight, connects the alarm circuit and sets the warning gongs ringing.

Gets Good Price For Hay.

Mr. Blank's Mistake

"I made a bad mistake today" said Blank to his wife. "I went to pay that subscription to the daily, which was $5. I found out afterwards that I had handed the agent a $10 bill and didn't notice it until he was gone—guess he didn't either. I suppose that fellow is honest and I'll get my money back, but it'll be some trouble."

"I've been telling you" said his wife "that you should deposit your money in the bank and then pay by check. Then you won't be making such mistakes and having so much trouble."

Was she right? She was. We invite one and all to open a checking account at our bank.

FARM TRAIN BACK

Covers 2,453 Miles And Stops
At One Hundred And Eight
Kentucky Towns And Cities.
Other Similar Trips Will Be Made.

From The Lexington Herald.

After visiting 108 of the principal cities and towns of Kentucky, traveling over 2,453 miles of railroad and being greeted by about 75,000 people, the Farm Special Train, which started from Lexington March 25, under the auspices of the State University, arrived home last night shortly after 5 o'clock.

The train was conducted by the College of Agriculture of State University in co-operation with the State Department of Agriculture and seven railroads, and was in the charge of Superintendent T. R. Bryant of the Extension Division of the college.

On board the train were President Henry S. Barker, of State University; Prof. M. A. Scoville, Prof. George Roberts, Prof. J. J. Hooper, Prof. A. J. Reed, Prof. C. W. Mathews, Miss Aubyn Chin, from this city, and the following professors from out of the city; T. D. Smith, of Richmond; Joseph T. Wing, of Ohio; E. C. Martindale, of Indiana; Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newman and Misses Neale S. Knowles and Eda L. Murphy, of the Iowa State College.

A number of State University students from this city also went on the train. Speeches were made at each stop and practical demonstrations of interest to farmers were given all over the state. The trip was a success from start to finish and frequent repetition of the experiment has been assured.

The railroads which contributed to the success of the train were: The Chesapeake & Ohio, the Louisville & Nashville, the Illinois Central, the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis, the Southern, the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis and the Queen & Crescent.

It is estimated that a total of 75,000 people heard the speakers and saw the demonstrations and exhibits of the train, which was made up of a number of day coaches, sleepers, exhibit cars, etc.

All of the promoters of the enterprise were well pleased with the results of the trip and hope that much good will result. In an interview about the results of the expedition, Superintendent Bryant, who had charge of the train, said:

"The Farm Special Train has been, to the curiosity seeker and the loafer, a disappointment, and likewise to those who thought a circus had come to town. By the earnest men and women, seeking instruction, the train has been pronounced the greatest factor in rural improvement that has ever been brought to Kentucky farmers.

"Other trains will be run frequently in the future, but will be more highly specialized, not attempting to cover the whole scope of agriculture, as this train has practically done. The carefully prearranged details were followed to the letter, all operation moving like clockwork and the whole movement has been an unqualified success."

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.
Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best.

Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

"If the council will only enact an ordinance compelling owners to keep their chickens in their own yards they will have earned the everlasting gratitude of every person in the city who desires a pretty yard or has a penchant for flowers. Following numerous requests, the council last night directed the ordinance committee to bring in a measure forbidding chickens running at large and it will now be up to the members at the next meeting. There is no more reason why chickens should be permitted to run free than that cows or pigs should, and if the council will forbid it, the members will find they are backed up by public sentiment."

LAST TREASURER OF CONFEDERACY IS DEAD.

Micajah Henry Clark Was Confidential Clerk to Jefferson Davis.

Micajah Henry Clark of Clarksville, Tenn., who died recently, was the confidential clerk of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States of America, throughout the existence of that government and the last treasurer of the Confederacy.

Entering the Confederate service at the outbreak of the war, Mr. Clark was with President Davis until the cabinet disbanded at Washington, Ga., after fleeing from the capital at Richmond. Besides performing the services of a confidential clerk to Mr. Davis, Mr. Clark assumed the duties of treasurer of the Confederacy. With coffers empty of coin and a paper currency of little value, he endeavored to furnish the money to finance the shattered armies that endeavored to hold the field against the Union forces.

For the year 1912 appropriations of over $10,000,000 have already been made by the state legislatures and other public bodies.

$14,500,000 SPENT IN FIGHT ON WHITE PLAGUE

$10,000,000 Already Appropriated For the 1912 Campaign.

The sum of $14,500,000 was spent during the year 1911 throughout the country in the war against tuberculosis, according to a statement issued by the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

This amount is practically the same as last year's total, but the percentage of public money, such as is received from federal, state, city or county funds, which is 66 per cent for 1911, shows a marked increase over the percentage of the public money appropriated in 1909.

The total sum spent in the United States last year of $11,800,000 went directly toward the treatment of the consumptives in sanatoriums and hospitals and the remainder to anti-tuberculosis associations, dispensaries, open air schools, boards of health and other agencies.

New York leads all the other states of the Union in the amount of money contributed toward the war. With the slogan, "No uncared for tuberculosis in 1915," $3,500,000 was raised in the state during the year for the campaign, over $1,000,000 of which represents private charity. Pennsylvania is second, with the contribution of $2,265,000, and Massachusetts third, with $1,108,000.

For the year 1912 appropriations of over $10,000,000 have already been made by the state legislatures and other public bodies.

Not the Ancient Joke, but the Nut Tree That Is Threatened by Blight.

The invitations sent from Harrisburg, Pa., to the various governors whose states are interested in the checking of the chestnut blight for the proposed conference to be held there in the first week of February has aroused widespread attention.

The state forestry department is planning for the presentation of some data covering the national spread of the blight, and the members of the commission, in order to prevent the spread of the blight, will urge the creation of a dead line district, which will be watched by every state interested.

Informal correspondence about the conference shows interest in every one of the states between Massachusetts and Ohio. Virginia may also come in.

LEAP YEAR STATUTE.

Made In Leap Year in a Woman's Reign 624 Years Ago.

On the subject of leap year—by the way, this is leap year—the Britannica says pessimistically that "no satisfactory" explanation has ever been offered of the origin of the custom for women to woo and not be wooed one year in every four. But it offers the leap year statute of Margaret, the maid of Norway. Margaret reigned over Scotland from 1286 to 1290, though she died before she could get there. In the year 1288, which was leap year, the following law was passed in her realm:

"It is statut and ordaint that during the rein of her malis blisst Megeste, for ilk yeare knowne as lepe year, ilk mayden ladye of bothe high and lowe estat shall haue liberte to bespeake ye man she likes; albeit he refuses to take her to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sumane pondis or less, as his estat may be, except and awis gif he can make it appear that he is betrothit an other woman he then shall be free."

WILL OF 27 WORDS.

Lawyer Wrote It In Hospital on a Prescription Blank.

The will of Robert Candee, a Chicago lawyer, one of the briefest ever recorded in the probate court there, was filed before Philip P. Bragstone. It disposed of personal property valued at $12,000 and names his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Candee, sole legatee and executrix.

Mr. Candee, who died at the Evanston hospital, was taken ill in his office with appendicitis. His daughter Elizabeth was born a short time before he was stricken. He remembered before undergoing an operation that he had written a will leaving his entire estate to his wife and, fearing that the birth of his daughter would invalidate the will, wrote another, which reads:

I, Robert Candee, will all my estate to my wife, Elizabeth Candee, and appoint her executrix without bond. This is made notwithstanding the birth of my daughter.

The will was written in pencil on a blank of Dr. William D. Alexander.

A NEW ORANGE.

Great Things Predicted For One Developed by a Chinese Fruit Grower.

The Lue Gim Gong is a new orange, originated by a Chinese fruit grower of De Land, Fla. According to a writer in Country Life in America, this new variety is going to revolutionize orange growing throughout that part of the country. It is declared that the fruit has been known to hang on the tree for one, two or even three years and that the tree bears well even when it is still carrying the crop of the previous year. This is not true of most other varieties. It is also said that the fruit can be shipped as early as June, although it is still too acid then. It is good in July, but better in August and September.

"The fruit is full of juice," says the quoted writer, "and hangs on the trees through the rainy summer weather. It can therefore be placed on the market when oranges are scarce and the highest prices can be secured."

$9,000 PAID FOR THREE FOXES.

Probably the highest price ever paid for fur bearing foxes was recorded in the purchase by Charles Dalton, a millionaire fox ranch owner of Tigrish, Prince Edward Island, from J. C. Calhoun of Gaspe, Que., of three black foxes for breeding purposes, the price being more than $9,000. The sale was made after several fox ranch owners had bid for the animals.

Dallas, Tex., April 27.—Col. W. G. Sterrett, well-known newspaper correspondent and now State game and fish warden for Texas, to-day announced the following method as a labor-saving device to get fishing bait without digging it:

"You take a broom handle three and one-half feet long," says Sterrett, "drive it into the spot likely to be inhabited by angle worms. Leave an end sticking up about six inches. Then take a rough board and rub it over the top of the broom handle. This rubbing will cause a vibration of the earth and the worms, angry and disturbed, will work their way out of the ground. A fellow can get a pail full of worms in a short time."

"But, Colonel," asked a reporter, "doesn't it take work to rub the board on top of the stick?"

"Get a negro to rub the board!" exclaimed the Colonel.

MR. BECKHAM'S LETTER.

We print in another column, Mr. Beckham's letter addressed to all Democrats. Every Democrat in Breckenridge county should read it. He tells the truth about Mr. Watterson. Mr. Beckham has been subjected to the most virulent, venomous attacks that any man ever had. What for? Simply because as Mr. Beckham truly says:

"I could have escaped the coveted calumnies of his pen and paper some years ago, if I had yielded to his solicitations that I make way for him to run for Governor of Kentucky. And in 1907, when, as Governor, I had to appoint a Mayor and other officers in the City of Louisville, I could have insured my election to the United States Senate by turning over to his gang the appointment of those officers and surrendering my determination to see that the laws of the Commonwealth were enforced in that City."

Another thing that has brought down the wrath of the Editor, Mr. Beckham assumed the right of all free American citizens as favoring Woodrow Wilson for the Presidential nomination—for this he calls him "a Kentucky crook in partnership with a New Jersey crook." It is high time the Kentucky Democrats were asserting themselves as Mr. Beckham has so manfully done, and pull loose from a gang who would turn over a great party to any interest who will bow down and serve them.

THE BOSSES AND POLITICIANS.

The bosses and politicians are all against Wilson for the reason that he is against them. A Clark manager said to the News, "If you want pie you want to get into the Clark band wagon. He and Ollie James will have the say when offices are handed out, no matter who is President." And so the matter goes. It is "pie" patriotism rather than good Government and rule of the people and by the people. If Woodrow Wilson was a machine politician and had so acted in his own state of New Jersey he would have no trouble in landing the nomination for President. In every state the politicians are fighting him just as they are in Kentucky.

We are for Wilson because we believe him to be an able man, fearless, bold and ambitious for the rights of the people. He is doing more for his state as Governor than any Governor in recent years. He has made his party redeem their ante-election pledges and promises and inaugurated a thorough political house cleaning. He will do the same if elected President. He is nearer the people than any man offering for that great office today. We havn't a word of criticism against Mr. Clark if he is the choice of a majority of the Democrats, well and good he will have our hearty support—but we do want the Wilson Democrats to come out and stand for him. Attend the convention and assert your rights as free American citizens and Democrats.

HORSE TAILS.

We Import Them From All Over the World and Also Export Them.

An item that seemed odd in the manifest of a steamer lately arrived from Japanese and Chinese ports was this in the list of her cargo from Tientsin: Fifty-five cases of horse tails.

As a matter of fact, horse tails or the hair thereof are a common article of importation into this country from China and from pretty much every other country on earth. The American market gets large quantities of them from China, but more from Russia, and horse tails are imported here from every other European country and from South America, from Australia, from all round the world. On the other hand, there are more or less American horse tails exported.

From various causes the supply of horse tails, like that of anything else, may in one country and another vary from year to year, and there may be years when the world's supply is short and years when it is plentiful, with corresponding changes in the range of prices. Horse tails have sold as low as 20 cents a pound, and they have sold for as much as $2. If stocks are scarce and high in London and ample at lower prices here New York importers ship horse tails to London. In the contrary circumstances London importers might ship horse tails here.

Horsehair hairs are sorted for length and colors, and they are used either alone or mixed with other fibers in the manufacture of various sorts of brushes and mixed with other materials in the manufacture of haircloth.—New York Sun.

A VERSE FOR THE BEGGAR.

Victor Hugo's Response to the Old Blind Soldier's Appeal.

A Frenchman, writing recently upon "The Mendicants of Paris," recalls a pretty anecdote of Victor Hugo and a blind beggar. The beggar was an old soldier, very feeble and quite sightless, who was led every day by his little granddaughter to a certain street corner, where he waited patiently for such scanty alms as the hurrying public might drop into a small box that hung from his neck.

One day a group of gentlemen halted near him, chatting, and he heard the name by which they called the one who lingered longest. Reaching forward as he, too, was about to go, he caught him by the coat.

"What do you want, my good man?" asked the gentleman. "I have already given you 2 sous."

"Yes, monsieur, and I have thanked you," replied the veteran. "It is something else that I want."

"What is it?"

"Verses."

"You shall have them," said the gentleman, and he kept his word. The next day the blind soldier bore on his breast a placard with a stanza to which was appended the name of Victor Hugo, and the alms in the box were quintupled. The lines may be thus translated:

Like Belisarius and like Homer blind,
Led by a young child on his pathway dim,
The hand that aids his need, pitying and kind,
He will not see, but God will see for him.

How One Word Was Born.
The two friends had been dining on divers and sundry strange dishes at the Cedars of Lebanon cafe, in the Syrian quarter of New York. They were drinking their coffee, thick with coal black grounds, and wondering whether they really enjoyed it, when Smithers suddenly cried out:

"Pataug! Pataug!"

The waiter hurried away and came back presently bringing an ordinary corkscrew.

"I was just testing," said Smithers to his companion, "the truth of the story that the first corkscrew seen in Beirut was brought there by a Yankee. It was a patented American contraption, and the Syrians were amazed at its convenience. They spelled out on it the mystic words, 'Pat. Aug. '76,' and took that to be the name of the implement. Now, I believe the story that pataug is its name all over the Levant."—New York Sun.

The First Quarantine.
From all accounts the custom of quarantine originated in Venice somewhere about the beginning of the twelfth century. All merchants and others coming from the eastern countries were obliged to remain in the house of St. Lazarus for a period of forty days before they were admitted into the city. Taking the idea from Venice, other European cities, especially port towns, instituted quarantine during seasons of plague, and well down into modern times most nations adopted the system, applying it when it was deemed necessary.

"She fainted away the other evening, and he didn't kiss her before he holtered for help."—Houston Post.

such a law—after I get mine." Then she ventured a little shaft of her own. "You don't believe in divorces. I judge you've never been married."

"Not once!" The spinster drew herself up, but Mrs. Wellington disarmed her with an unexpected bouquet:

"Oh, lucky woman! Don't let any heartless man delude you into taking the fatal step."

Anne Gattle was nothing if not honest. She confessed frankly: "I must say that nobody has made any violent efforts to compel me to. That's why I'm going to China."

"To China!" Mrs. Wellington gasped, hardly believing her ears. "My dear! You don't intend to marry a laundryman?"

"The idea! I'm going as a missionary."

"A missionary? Why leave Chicago?" Mrs. Wellington's eye softened more or less convincingly: "Oh, lovely! How I should do upon being a missionary. I really think that after I get my divorce I might have a try at it. I had thought of a convent, but being a missionary must be much more exciting." She dismissed the dream with an abrupt shake of the head. "Excuse me, but do you happen to have any matches?"

"Matches! I never carry them!"

"They never have matches in the women's room, and I've used my last one."

Miss Gattle took another reef in her tight lips. "Do you smoke cigarettes?"

Mrs. Wellington's echoed disgust with disgust: "Oh, no, indeed. I loathe them. I have the most dainty little cigars. Did you ever try one?"

Miss Gattle stiffened into one exclamation point: "Cigars! Me!"

Mrs. Jimmie was so well used to being disapproved of that it never disturbed her. She went on as if the face opposite were not alive with horror: "I should think that cigars might be a great consolation to a lady missionary in the long lone hours of—what do missionaries do when they're not missionarying?"

"That depends."

There was something almost spiritual in Mrs. Jimmie's beatific look: "I can't tell you what consolation my cigars have given me in my troubles. Mr. Wellington objected—but then Mr. Wellington objected to nearly everything I did. That's why I am forced to this dreadful step."

"Cigars?"

"Divorces."

"Well, this will be only my second—my other was such a nuisance. I got that from Jimmie, too. But it didn't take. Then we made up and remarried. Rather odd, having a second honeymoon with one's first husband. But remarriage didn't succeed any better. Jimmie fell off the water-wagon with an awful splash, and he was rewarded with a look and a phrase:

"You have saved my life."

He started to repeat his "Don't mention it," but it seemed inappropriate, so he said nothing, and she vanished behind a door. He turned away, saying to himself that it promised to be a pleasant journey. He was halted by another voice—another woman's voice:

"Pardon me, but is this the car for Reno?"

He turned to smile, "I believe so!" Then his eyes widened as he recognized the speaker.

"Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb!"

It promised to be a curious journey.

Women!

If weak, you need Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is made from gentle herbs, acts in a natural manner, and has no bad results, as some of the strong drugs sometimes used. As a medicine—a tonic—for weak, tired, worn-out women, Cardui has been a popular success for over 50 years.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Lula Walden, of Gramlin, S. C., followed this advice. Read her letter: "I was so weak, when I first began to take Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Now, I can do all the general housework, for a family of 9." Try Cardui for your troubles. It may be the very remedy you need.

I've really become quite addicted to them."

"Divorces?"

"Cigars. Do stay here till I come back. I have so much to say to you."

Miss Gattle shook her head in despair. She could understand a dozen heathen dialects better than the speech of so utterly a foreigner as her fellow-countrywoman. Mrs. Jimmie hastened away, rather pleased at the shocks she had administered. She enjoyed her own electricity.

In the corridor she administered another thrill—this time to a tall young man—stranger, as alert for flirtation as a weasel for mischief. He huddled himself and his suitcases into as flat a space as possible, murmuring:

"These corridors are so narrow, aren't they?"

"Aren't they?" said Mrs. Jimmie. "So sorry to trouble you."

"Don't mention it."

She passed on, their glances fencing like playful foils. Then she paused: "Excuse me. Could you lend me a match? They never have matches in the Women's Room."

He succeeded in producing a box after much shifting of burdens, and he was rewarded with a look and a phrase:

"You have saved my life."

He started to repeat his "Don't mention it," but it seemed inappropriate, so he said nothing, and she vanished behind a door. He turned away, saying to himself that it promised to be a pleasant journey. He was halted by another voice—another woman's voice:

"Pardon me, but is this the car for Reno?"

He turned to smile, "I believe so!" Then his eyes widened as he recognized the speaker.

"Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb!"

It promised to be a curious journey.

TO RUN EASTERN CAMPAIGN.

Republican Congress Committee to Make Fairchild Vice Chairman.

Arrangements for the reorganization of the Republican congressional campaign committee have been practically completed. A new plan will be tried this time, and a vice chairman chosen to have charge of the eastern headquarters. Representative McKinley of Illinois, who was chairman of the committee last year, will be re-elected to that place, and Representative David Fairchild of New York will be vice chairman. Mr. Fairchild will have the direction of the congressional campaign in the eastern states, while Mr. McKinley will devote himself chiefly to the middle and western states.

The committee maintains a permanent bureau in Washington, which keeps close watch on the doings of congress, and is constantly compiling material for campaign use. Preparations are making for an unusually vigorous congressional campaign in 1912.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

SIMPLE SEASONING A MERIT.

By Martha McCulloch Williams. Paper bag cookery conserves the natural juices and savors of food stuffs and so requires but light seasoning.

Take the case of so-called melted butter. Ordinarily, a mixture of butter, flour and water, variously spiced and seasoned and cooked to a pasty consistency, it must give the stomach that receive it a mighty wrestle. Melted butter, viscous and heavy, means overwork for it—potential dyspepsia. Far otherwise with real melted butter—butter pure and simple, mixed only with the salts and savors of food stuffs.

I wish you would try this sort of melted butter for either meats or vegetables. Put the butter in an enamel sauce pan with salt, pepper, paprika, the least sprinkle of fine herbs and a very little nutmeg. Add half the butter—bulk of boiling water, cook together for five minutes, stirring well, then put in either lemon juice, claret or sherry equal in quantity to the boiling water, and let stand over hot water until ready to serve.

Since omelets are possible to the paper bag, here follow directions for several sorts, each a little out of the common. All must be cooked alike—in a very well-buttered bag of proper size, set in a very hot oven at first, and the heat slackened a third or even a half, after three to five minutes.

Plain Omelet: This plain omelet can be the foundation of many other sorts. By doubling the egg contents and reducing the milk one-half, it becomes richer and lighter. But just as given it is fine for breakfast or luncheon. Begin by beating very light three eggs, white and yolks separate. Add to the yolks a tablespoonful of flour sifted with half a teaspoonful of baking powder and half as much salt. Melt a spoonful of butter in a pint of milk, beat it gradually into the egg and flour mixture—the milk must be hot, but not boiling—then fold in lightly the stiffly beaten whites, pour into your bag, seal, put on trivet and cook fifteen minutes.

Chicken or Ham Omelet: To turn this into chicken omelet, add a very little more flour to the mixture, then stir in well just before putting it in the bag a cup of cold chicken minced very fine and seasoned lightly with onion juice or minced celery. For ham omelet leave out half the flour and scant the allowance of salt and baking powder. Water can be used instead of milk—in that case, put in more melted butter. Mince or grind the cooked ham very fine and season it with onion juice and the barest dusting of sugar, not enough to taste, only to throw up the pliancy of the ham. Put in the minced ham before the beaten whites, mix lightly, put in a well buttered bag and bake fifteen minutes.

Spanish Omelet: Chop very fine a stalk of celery, a green pepper scalded in boiling salt water but not wilted, one very small onion, one large peeled tomato, with salt and pepper to taste, and a bare dash of Worcester sauce. Mix well, put in a saucepan, and cook until tender in a little butter—say eight to ten minutes. The vegetables should only simmer. Make a six-egg omelet, but do not double the milk. Put in plenty of melted butter besides what the vegetables supply. Stir them in well before the beaten whites, put in the bag as quickly as possible after the whites are added, seal and bake fifteen to eighteen minutes.

CUTLETS AND CUTLETS.

By Nicolas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Cutlets à la St. Cecile.—Take four lamb cutlets, from half a pint to a pint of parboiled peas and a pound of parboiled new potatoes. Grease two bags thickly. Put the peas and potatoes, together with one and a half ounces of butter, in one bag. Place on broiler and put in a moderately hot oven. Let them cook for twenty minutes before putting in the bag with the cutlets. Meanwhile trim the cutlets very neatly, free them from superfluous fat, flatten them with a wooden mallet and spread them on both sides with a layer of foie gras. Have ready some freshly fried bread crumbs. Sprinkle these lightly on each side of the cutlets. Take care not to overdo this. Place gently in a D-size bag. Fold, clip, place on broiler in the oven, and cook for twenty minutes. Dish up the peas and potatoes as a border. Put the cutlets in the middle. Pour their own gravy over them and serve at once.

Cutlets aux Navettes.—Take half a bunch of young French turnips, peel, and trim them as nearly as possible to one size. Dust them with salt and pepper. Take a pound and a half of mutton cutlets. Trim as above directed. Dust well with celery salt, a very little white pepper and some salted flour. Grease a bag well. Put in half the turnips, then the cutlets, then the rest of the turnips. Add half a pint of chicken stock, fold, clip, place on broiler and cook slowly for an hour and a half. Dish up on a hot dish, with the turnips as a border. Pour the sauce, which will be of a delicate creamy consistency and taste, over, and serve with asparagus, hand separately.

NEW PARTNER IN FIRM OF J. P. MORGAN & CO.

He is Horatio G. Lloyd of Philadelphia, Who Helped Still 1907 Panic.

Horatio G. Lloyd of Philadelphia has become partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., bringing the partnership list up to eleven. Four new men have gone into the firm in the last four years, and each is a young banker whose mettle was tried in the panic of 1907.

For two years Mr. Lloyd has been a general partner of Drexel & Co. of Philadelphia, and the Morgan and Drexel interests have remained closely allied since the dissolution of the original partnership of Drexel, Morgan & Co. Mr. Lloyd went into the Philadelphia banking house after holding the presidency of the Commercial Trust company of Philadelphia for about eight years. He was one of the leaders of the Philadelphia bankers who helped to stem the panic of 1907. He was credited with the successful handling of the situation in that city and engineered the transaction by which nine financial institutions of that city were relieved in 1908 of the ungodly collateral of a collapsed Canadian reorganization syndicate. The nine institutions eventually got the face value of their loans with interest.

The Morgan firm had been unchanged for many years when H. P. Davison was taken into partnership on Jan. 1, 1909. He had distinguished himself in the panic and resigned a vice presidency of the First National bank of New York to join Mr. Morgan. This was the first addition to the firm since the admission of George W. Perkins seven years before. When Mr. Perkins retired last year William H. Porter, former president of the Chemical National bank, and Thomas W. Lamont and Horatio G. Lloyd, J. P. Morgan, Jr., and Temple Bowdoin hold Stock Exchange memberships.

Mr. Lloyd also becomes member of Morgan, Grenfell & Co. of London and Morgan, Harjes & Co. of Paris.
